If you enjoy the marriage of fruit and warm Asian flavours, you will appreciate the combination of lemongrass, ginger and coconut in this autumn-inspired dessert.

Not much goes to waste here. Pear peels are used to infuse the poaching liquid with extra flavour, as it makes for a light and aromatic pear, lemongrass and ginger tonic – wonderful for digestion, which can be enjoyed warm or cold depending on the mood.

Ingredients serves 4 (you can make this ahead and serve some later)

- 1.5 litres filtered water
- 1 lemongrass and ginger tea bag
- 4 medium-sized pears (about 135g each)
- Peel of ½ lime
- 1 stalk lemongrass, chopped into 4 pieces
- 8g knob fresh ginger, cut into 4 pieces

To serve

- 4 scoops vanilla ice cream

Pears poached in lemongrass & ginger tea

- 2 tbsp shredded coconut

METHOD

Bring water to a boil in a large saucepan. In the meantime, peel pears, reserving the peels. Once the water is boiling, add the tea bag, pears and peelings, lime peel, chopped lemongrass and ginger. Simmer gently for 15 minutes. Turn off the heat, cover the saucepan and allow the pears and liquid to come to room temperature and the pears to finish poaching.

To serve pears, cut them lengthways. Remove the core using a teaspoon. Arrange one or two pear halves in a serving bowl. Top with a scoop of ice cream mixed with lightly toasted coconut through it.

Store pears in an airtight container in the fridge. Pour poaching liquid into a jar or bottle and store in the fridge for up to four days. Dilute the tonic with water or drink straight up, cold or warm. You can even blend the ginger and pear peel into the liquid for an even more wholesome drink.
